Next, in a single decree, he made Tokio the capital of the solidified provinces of eastern and western Japan. There was a slight rebellion at the time of this change, but the Emperor won and established himself firmly in the hearts of the people by promoting some of the leading rebels to positions of trust under the government.

Under his reign the lords of the soil (Daimios) yielded their feudal rights to the nation, an act which more than any other contributed to placing Japan on a firm footing as a world power. It enabled the building of railways and eduto all the principal seaports. The Em- the port as follows:

Wherever social science is studied her books are deemed weighty as interpretations of conditions and as prophecies of coming economic and political changes.

From the poet's standpoint sne woman to whom God has given

Grace to see
Life's most perplexing mystery;
The beauty that forever springs
In common, unregarded things;

She knows the stir of youth is sweet In children of the city street. That sets the tender feet to darge And seek the regions of romance.

With pity, too, her heart is torn For men uprooted from their soil For women sunk in endless toil, And well she knows to lift each heart With spell of some remembered art That springs from spindle or from loon

From the standpoint of the educator she has been deemed worthy of receiving the highest degrees ever conferred or women by the older New England universities. From the standpoint of the poor friendless and alien elements of Chicago's population she is "St. Jane." Mediating between "the haves" and the "have nots," the liberally educated and the illiterate, the descendants of the first settlers and the latest emigrants from Croatia, or Syria, the individualists and the socialists, the irreligious secularists and pious other worldings, Miss Addams has come to occupy a unique place in Chicago's life, with influence stretching far out into the nation and the world. For she is an ardent "pacificist," and foes of militarism the world over have found her argument against war able and vital because contemporaneous and practical. She is a thinker on fundamental problems of democracy, face to face with altered industrial conditions and disintegrating codes of personal and family ethics and ancient faiths. She is an chiscment, and so takes her place in the international "feminist" movement.

This being so, she may write a book like "The New Conscience and an Ancient Evil" (The Macmillan Company) with a sense of security from attack or of indifference to it if it comes, such as a woman with similar views but no stored-up community-capital in her favor might not have. For it is with a subject often tabooed in the past that she deals. That such a book may now be written without rousing personal feeling against the writer or lessening her personal prestige; that the substance of it has been given by her in a formal address to assembled delegates of the federated Protestant churches of the country; that it is but a condensed argument popularly expressed of the results of a series of investigations of vice in American cities, and that the subject dealt with is one that churches, women's clubs, civic reform organizations and journalists are now dealing with openly and concretely; all these facts are signs of the times. Prudery has imposed upon teachers set apart for the guidance of the people a dumbness on this subject which is now being broken. The whole problem is being dealt with by a new sort of investigators. To de cide upon ways and means of rightful instruction on matters of personal morals is being accepted by schools and educators as a part of their social duty, alterations in standards and modes of family life forcing it upon them.

Consequently Miss Addams finds a constituency awaiting her that, however much it may be startled by the evidence she presents, is prepared to face the obey conscience and set about eliminating evil, at least to the extent of not being particeps criminis through either ignorance or prudery. Miss Addams is optimistic in the sense that she agrees with many other observers that humanity errs far less than might be expected, considering the con ditions under which the multitudes of men and women live. She also is confident that new agencies have now come to fight for purity that were absent from the side of women when Josephine Butler was champion of the cause in England or Frances Willard in America. also has been profoundly impressed with the range and extent of the assistance from all sorts of men which she and other foes of "the white slave" move-

Part I .- "The Historical Background"-is based upon the proposition that in order to understand the child, we must think historically, not only as to what has been recorded since the dawn of history, but regarding the origin and development of species as interpreted in various stages of investigation. Part II. - "The Genetic Background"-is rather too technical for the ordinary elementary teacher or parent, for whose use and assistance the book is inteded. Part III-"The Pedagogy of the Primary School"-is very rich in ideas and illustrations drawn from observation, the chapters on drawing and dramatic expression being particularly valuable. Part IV .- "The Conservation of Child Life"-deals with the care of the body and the preservation of personality. The standard of "normal" childhood is, throughout, held very high, approxi mating the ideal rather than the average. An appendix contains a sketch of the history and methods of the Montessori kindergarten.

'Andorra, The Hidden Republic."-By Lewis Gaston Leary. New York. Mc Bride, Nast & Co. High up in the eastern range of the Pyrenees lies the little republic, about half as large as the city of New York, which, for more than a thousand years has made its own laws for its never more than 6000 inhabitants, and has had no part in the falling and rising of other govern ments. Very little has been written in English about this lovely and interesting country, and this historical and travel sketch offers a pleasant morsel to the lover of the unhackneved, and is a real contribution to the study of racial characteristics as determined by environment.

"The Burden of Poverty."-By Charles

F. Dole. "The Super Race."-By Scott Nearing.

New York. B. W. Huebsch. Two volumes in the "Art of Life" series, edited by Edward Howard Griggs. Mr. Dole presents a straight forward statement of the problem of poverty, its causes and the possibility of its eradication, followed by discussion of workable rules and meth ods looking toward this end. He writes with a heart for the poor, but with a broad view of mutual duty and responsibility. The last chapter-"A Practical Question"-drives the ques tion well home: "Is the task pos sible? Who cares enough for it . Will you do whatever justice and human brotherhood seem to require? Will you act, move, and speak, and vote, upon one or a dozen different questions, as far and as fast

In "The Super Race" the problem of human life is made the occasion of call for the "great race that is to come" and a discussion of measures which shall raise the standard of future generations. Professor Nearing believes in the capacity of the human nature for high development, and is bound by no convention that cannot satisfy him as to its present day reason for being. In the final chapter-"The American Opportunity"-he "The . . . American people have within their grasp the torch of social progress. Can they carry it in the "an, lighting the dark caverns of the future? Can they develop race of men who shall set a standard for the world .

Both books are worthily earnes and thought-provoking.

"The Guardians of the Columbia"-By John H. Williams, Tacoma: Published by the author. In this picturesque description of western mountain scenery the writer succeeds admirably in mak ing his presentation "a call to better appreciation of the splendor and worth our own land." The three divisions of the book deal with the river, the mountains and the forests, the last subject being treated by Harold D. Langille, formerly of the United States forest service. Without any attempt at exaggeration the author presents his subject simply and sympathetically, making it an appeal not only to the lover of magnificent scenery and of Indian legend, but also to the geologist, the economist and the climber. More than 200 illustrations, eight of them in colors, add much to the book's attractiveness.

"Miss Billy's Decision"-By Eleanor H. Porter. Boston. L. C. Page & Co. An entertaining presentation of the somewhat hackneyed theme, "Love and the artistic temperament," with an ending that is pleasing, though scarcely convincing. The heroine is as likable as she was in "Miss/Billy," and some amusing situations grow out of her impulsive generosity.

"The Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts"-By Helen W. Henderson. Boston. L. C. Page & Co. In a text of 365 pages, profusely illustrated, the author gives a thoroughly readable account of the treasures to be found in the various public art collections of Philadelphia, together with brief, enter taining sketches of some of the painters and seulptors whose work is repre seated. An historical sketch of the academy also is given and an account of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania. Particular emphasis is laid upon the historical portraits in the different collections, and the point made that although the academy is not rich in work of the old masters, "its great value as a museum thor oughly representative of the art of its own particular epoch and locality cannot be too much insisted upon.

"Applied Socialism"-By John Spargo New York. B. W. Huebsch. The book comprises the substance of a second series of leetures delivered before the Round School of Social Science, of New York, and carries the subject of social ism on from the point reached in a former course as embodied in the au thor's "Elements of Socialism." The present series takes up opposing argu ments in detail and with fairness, de voting also considerable effort to a clearing up of the doubts of those who are in the valley of indecision. The author, who is a recognized exponent of the orthodox socialism, as distinguished from the later and more ideal istic type, possesses intellectual individuality, and the lectures furnish a clear and energetic presentment of the application of socialistic ideas to the

Our and then in their turns of the stage coach and of the locomotive; and we ourselves have seen the evolution of the bicycle and the motor car, each of which has already left its mark and written its history upon the dust of the highways, a history to be continued into the coming centuries.

From all time and in every land progress has always been bitterly opposed, and progress in road-making has been no exception to this rule. In the Georgian era acts of Parliament were passed under severe penalties to compel the use of wheels more like garden rollers than wheels; 16 inches wide was enforced by one act, under the idea that wide wheels, would roll flat the required surface of the road, and only by degrees did it dawn upon the authorities that the roads themselves and not the wheels required special attention.

At the beginning of the nineteenth century McAdam and Telford made the first attempt, since the days of the Romans, at scientific road-making. The earliest mail coaches traveled at a speed of about six miles an hour, but the speed improved as the roads improved. improved as the roads improved. Queen Elizabeth set the example of riding in a coach through London, and when her example was imitated and many private carriages became fashionable there was fearful jealousy and opposition on the part of the London watermen; for the Thames had hitherto been the highway for all classes, although this was perhaps largely owing to the deplorable condition of the streets. When the first coaches came into use they were declared to be wicked emblems of pride and an act of Parliament was actually passed through the Commons in 1601 "to restrain the excessive and superfluous use of coaches" and orders were issued that people ought to be content to go by water or else on foot. Hackney coaches and sedan chairs came into being in London about the same date (1634) and the latter were in common use until about 1821.

People can hardly realize the roadles. condition of Britain so late as the year 1663, when turnpike roads began somewhat to improve matters. Meanwhile, in France and Holland there were already some good roads. The old British sys tem of leaving the repair of the roads to the different parishes had proved a ghastly failure; the new idea was to transfer the main roads to the toll-bars, making the user pay the cost; of course, turnpike riots followed, and there was great opposition. And in time the turi pikes proved a failure, owing to corruption and waste and folly of officials and lack of unity of design.

W ended more than justified the estimate of the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor, that the total value would in 1912 for the first time be more than $1,000,000,000. That bureau, which has just completed its figures showing the exportation of manufactures, states that the total value of manufactures exported in the fiscal year was $1,021,753,918, of which $674,302,903 was the value of manufactures ready for consumption and $347,451,015 that of manufacture for further use in manufacturing. This total does not include foodstuffs which have undergone a process of preparation or manufacture, since the bureau groups articles of that class under the general heading of foodstuffs" exported. A comparison of the figures of 1912 with those of 1902 gives the following:

Manufactures ready for consumption in 1912, $674,000,000, against $322,000,000 in 1902; manufactures for further use in manufacturing in 1912,

$347,000,000, against $132,000,000 in 1902; total manufactures exported in 1912, $1,022,000,000, against $454,000,000 in 1902. The principal articles forming this billion dollars' worth of manufactures exported are: Iron and steel, copper, mineral oil, manufactures of wood, leather and manufactures thereof, cotton manufactures, are and carriages, automobiles and paper and manufactures thereof.

SEMI-PRINCESSE STYLE GOWN

Practical as well as pretty

THE simple gown that is made in semiprincesse style is practical, useful and fashionable. This one can be made as illustrated, with a fancy collar and elbow sleeves, or it can be finished with a neck-band and with long sleeves, in shirt waist style. It is adapted to a great many different materials, but the dress illustrated is made from Scotch gingham with collar and cuffs and belt plain matching the stripe in color.

The gown consists of blouse and skirt. The blouse is laid in one tuck over each shoulder and is finished with hems at the front edges. The sleeves are cut in one piece each. When made in elbow length, they are finished with bands and cuffs: when made in full length they are finished with openings and cuffs in shirt waist style. The skirt is sixgored and without fulness over the hips.

The quantity of material required for the medium size is 7 yards 27 inches wide, 51/2 yards 36 or 51/4 yards 44, with % yard 27 inches wide for the trimming. The pattern, No. 7036, cut in sizes from 34 to 44 inches bust measure, can be bought at any May Manton agency or will be sent by mail. Address 102 West 32d street, New York, or Masonic Temple, Chicago.

CREAMED CHICKEN IN PEPPER SHELLS

THE remnants of a former dinner may I be served in this way: Cut just enough of the bottom from the peppers to allow of their standing upright on a greased pan, and also cut a thin slice from the stem end. Scoop out all the seeds and tough white membrane, rinse in cold water and fill with the chicken mixed with hot cream sauce. Cover with fine bread crumbs moistened with melted butter, and set in a moderate oven for about 20 minutes Fish, cooked meats and smoked beef parboiled in water may be substituted for chicken. Cooked rice, cream sauce and cheese will also make a nutritious filling for either peppers or tomatoes to be baked.

The report is signed by Representatives Gardner of Massachusetts. Young of Michigan and Danforth of New York Representative Sterling of Illinois, who HOUSEWORK TO believes in dissolving the big combinations, will submit a separate report.

The report advocates the creation of an interstate commission of industry to be clothed with extensive powers of regulation and with power to fix reasonable prices for the output of corporations. He asked whether it was Lis fault or the fault of the public that the London opera house had not succeeded. He believed that a love for grand opera must be inherited, and that was why govern ments on the ntinent and everywhere, with the exception of America, subsidized opera and built houses, and it had always been a mystery to him why London, the intelligence of London, allowed itself to be without it. Mr. Hammerstein said it would be a crime to use that house for music hall purposes. He did not believe that anywhere else in the world there was so much inborn love of music as in this country. He was going to begin again in the middle of November and end-when the public did not come again.

thus providing means to employ the requisite number of building inspectors, to bring the department up to a standard of excellence necessary to reduce the possibility of accident to a minimum, and with the delegation of additional authority, positively to eliminate the recurrence of past experiences with collapsed buildings, under construction by recedings of the past week suddenty brought the tariff into great prominence. The action of the Senate in passing several of the House tariff bills, added to the knowledge that both the Republican and the House tariff bills, added to the knowledge that both the Republican and the House tariff up to the passing several of the House tariff to the company of the bills be sent there, and at the White House, should any of the bills be sent there, political advantage among the leaders of both parties, and at the White House, should any of the bills be sent there, political will also play a large part in determining what is to be done. That is the disadvantage of getting the tariff up just in advance of a presidential campaign.

It was with a view to escaping from such a situation that the Republican party revised the tariff and advance of a presidential campaign. But the revision was unsatisfact and party revised the tariff and when the Republican party revised the tariff of the tariff up just in advance of a presidential campaign. But the revision was unsatisfact acrony, and tariff of the Tart administration, at a time farthest removed from a political campaign of the Tart administration, at a time farthest removed from a political campaign. Today the boys street playground we boys street playgro has focused public attention on avy, and it is safe to say that the liey of doing nothing is not a popular is, eyen among Democrats. It was opted early in the present session as part of the Democratic policy of commy; and it was on that theory at the recent caucus acted as it did.

tee's reports last week indicate that the committee is widely divided as to what kind of legislation should be enacted. This divided state exists also among House members generally, and will make the work of securing legislation of any kind exceedingly difficult. Of course, there is no thought of trying to pass any bills at the present session, nor will there be time for legislation at the short session next winter. The question will come up early in the next Congress, however, at which time it may be that something can be done. The majority report of the Stanley committee.

Arseno, Fourth st.; $2. $30.000. ority report of the Stanley committee is noteworthy for two things: It proposes changes in the Sherman law which would enable individuals or corporations, feeling themselves aggrieved, to begin feeling themselves aggrieved. feeling themselves aggrieved, to begin suit against the offending corporation. and that would put the burden of proof as to whether there has been restraint of trade, not on the government, where it always has been, but upon the same corporation. Both these propositions are revolutionary in character. The first would take the enforcement of the law out of the hands of the federal administration, for at present no suit can be brought without the consent of the attorney-general, or in other words, the it always has been, but upon the same torney-general, or in other words, the President. The second would set aside the ancient principle that when any one is accused of an offense that would deprive him of his liberty in case of conprive him of his liberty in case of conviction, the burden of proof is upon the government, on the old time theory that one is supposed to be innocent until proven guilty.

The foregoing three subjects were the most important of the week in Congress.

It seems certain that provision will be made before adjournment for civil government in Alaska and partial home rule. Both houses have passed an Alaskan government bill, but they differ in some minor details which will no doubt be adjusted in conference. There is also some fixed in conference. There is also some for the lideling archibald, these opponents of the judicial recall-say, would probably likelihood that the Senate will pass the bill, already gone through the House, convince the country that present ma providing for a department of labor, its head to have a seat in the cabinet. Solutio throughout the year is under the supervision of a committee of citizens appointed by the selectmen and serving without pay; a director who acts as the executive officer of the committee, a superintendent who has charge of business pertaining to the departments and maintenance of the property, and a corps of instructors and assistants, both men and women.

"The result of all this work," said Mr.

Mason, "is that the general order and conduct on the playgrounds is much better. There seems to be more appreciation of the rights of others and of public property.

"There has been more and closer cooperation between the various departments of the town, like the public school, police, park and playground departments, in working out the problems. We are now aiming to make the playgrounds more attractive and the methods of supervision more effective in training for the best type of citizenship."

The estate of John W. Gates is the largest nolder of United States Realty debenture onds which are selling at 90, and Charles Gates is credited with the responsibil-ty of the recent advance. For the last five years United States Realty has earned an average of nearly per cent a year on the outstanding stock and the present dividend rate is per cent. The company could easily ay 6 per cent, but the policy is to trengthen the company's position to a point where there will be no question of naintaining the increase when it is made. or this reason the best informed people are not looking for an it rease in the resent year. For the last five years contract profits ave been much larger than they were in the first three years of the company's existence. The total profits, income from investments and sales of real estate nd profits or contracts with the per centage of each to the whole for eight ments is now ample to meet all charges including interest on the company's bonds, leaving the balance of income from these investments and the profits from the George A. Fuller Company and the real estate operating department for dividends on the stock. The income from rents on the company's investment in office buildings is much larger this year than last as there was a material influ of new tenants on May 1.

THE GRAIN MARKET

C. F. & G. W. Eddy, Inc., of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, received the following from their Chicago correspondent: Wheat-Market was dull and easier, due to the weather conditions over Sunday. The weather was not favorable for the spread of rust and neither were the conditions this morning. It was generally clear in the Canadian northwest, for the first time in many days. There were enough rust reports in the northwest to cause a distinct feeling of uneasiness and caution, until the crop is advanced a little further. The reports indicate that a considerable portion of the erop is beyond harm, but enough is still subject to deterioration from rust to seriously affect the total results.

Receipts were heavy in the Southwest, Kansas City getting 918,000 bushels and St. Louis 626,000 bushels, a total of 1,-544,000 bushels against 571,000 last year. Foreign markets quiet and a little easier. Corn-Trading quite active and the market firm. Prices advanced about a cent a bushel, with most strength in the old crop positions. Small receipts and an oversold condition of the old crop had general commission house buying on the 407 bxs cheese, 4533 cs eggs. strength of the crop situation. Rain is reported greatly needed in Kansas and Oklahoma, and there are many reports to the effect that late planted corn is heading out only about half the usual height.

After pointing out that from July 1, been expended for additions, betterments following: and extensions and that the Seaboard Air Line was now in good physical condition. President Meldrum in a recent letter, had the following to say regarding the outlook:

"The company owns one sixth interest in the Richmond-Washington Company, whch controls the most direct route between Richmond, Va., and Washington, D. C., and under traffic arrangements with the Pennsylvania railroad the Seaboard maintains through car service between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and the South. The Seaboard Air Line also owns the entire capital stock of the Baltimore Steam Packet Company, which owns and operaters a fleet of steamers plying Chesapeake bay between Baltimore, Md., and Old Point Comfort, Norfolk and Portsmouth, Va. In addition the company owns 2100 shares (about one seventh) of the capital stock of the Old Dominion Steamship Company, operating steamers between New York city, Norfolk and Portsmouth, Va."

SUMMER TRIP ROUND THE COASTS OF GREAT BRITAIN

WE wondered some time where to go for our summer holidays and finally decided to strike out in quite a fresh direction and make a tour extend-ing right round the north of Scotland and home by Belfast and the south coast to London, says one writing from England. We started on the steamship Fin-1670 tons, and were entertained with the loading of the vessel. These boats carry both cargo and passengers; in fact the preference is given to the cargo. We found on board the Fingal a tigress, a horse, and a kangaroo, besides the more ordinary goods. Our pastime while on deck consisted in trying to pick out the different towns we passed along the coast, but this was rather difficult and some one declared we had passed Lowestoft three times.

Describing the qualities that make women successful in business as estimated by a number of women writers for a certain book on employments for women, a contributor to the Youth's Companion says:

First upon the list of necessary qualities, mentioned three times as often as any other, is tact, or sympathy-the ca pacity for entering into the thoughts and feelings of others. Next comes patience, and then judgment, courage, enthusiasm for work, and initiative,

Not long ago Ambassador Bryce, in an article in the Companion on the secret of personal influence, named and defined four qualities, two or more of which are always found in those who lead or inspire men. They are initiative, the power of thinking for yourself; tenacity, the ability to adhere to a decision once made; judgment, the power of forecasting the results of action, and sympathy, the power of entering into the feelings of others.

They are the same qualities that the women named as necessary to success in the business of earning a living. It is Mounted boy scouts are a novelty in not by chance that the lists are the

Wisconsin's New Colonization Plan

There is at present on foot in Wisconsin a project of which the successful carrying out involves the application of progressive ideas to the state's land policy. It will mean, if adopted, the establishment of direct relations between the state, as a land owner, and the person who wants to possess himself of some of the state's land with the purpose of developing it. It proposes to do away with the land speculator; that is, the middleman.

Albert L. Williams of Madison is credited with the conception of the plan. It is very simple, contemplating the bringing of the colonist and the land together without the employment of intermediaries or red tape, or the assessment or payment of any form of tribute. The state, in the first instance, is to acquire land, at present unproductive, at the cheapest possible wholesale price; in the second instance, it is to sell this land to colonists at a fair market value, all profits to be turned into a communal fund for the benefit of the new comers.

The petty speculator reaps the profits at present. He not only compels the settler or colonist to pay him tribute, but his methods very frequently discourage settlement and colonization. He sells land purchased cheaply for a high price, holding other and adjoining land for the unearned increment. The Williams idea also is that by becoming, as it were, wards of the state, especially in their struggling period, the communal spirit will grow up among the settlers. This, of course, will be promoted and encouraged by common interest in the profits from the sales of land in the settlement.

In its elaborated form, the Williams plan provides for community of interest in several respects. It is stated with reference to it, for example, that "every facility which the individual cannot readily provide will be supplied cooperatively," and that, "in the beginning even such common necessities as teams, wagons and horse-drawn implements are to be provided." A cooperative store is also planned; likewise warehouses for receiving and marketing produce. Under the plan, no appropriation from the state treasury, and no contribution from philanthropy is to be asked. The money necessary to the conduct of the colony, or community, is to come out of the land purchased through the instrumentality of the state at its fair value.

Governor McGovern, it is understood, is favorably inclined toward the project. He has already appointed a committee to investigate the subject, and the entire matter will shortly be acted upon by the state board of public affairs. It will probably be found that while state aid in its ordinary sense may not be necessary to this undertaking, state credit will be very essential to it. This might be lent with perfect safety, and without in the least impairing the value of the enterprise in an economic sense. The colonists, in other words, might better be debtors to the state for a time than debtors to private money-lenders, especially money-lenders of the unscrupulous class.

A GREAT deal of nonsense is talked at present in connection with the findings of a coroner's jury in Illinois relating to the ability of women, acting as wireless operators, to rise to the demands of emergencies and crises. In the discussion that has ensued one might, if one were looking for it, find material to support the absurd proposition that men always rise to the demands of emergencies and crises. The jury in ques-

An inexhaustible storehouse of testimony might be drawn upon to prove that women are fully as calm as men, and display as much judgment as men, in circumstances and situations that call for self-possession and self-control. It would be no more just to men than it is to women to cite a single or exceptional case to their disadvantage. It is an unworthy and undeserved aspersion upon womanthood to assume it to be inferior to manhood in any particular. The assumption that woman, as a woman, is naturally deficient, is a survival of a barbaric age.

THE time is coming when, if the federal, state and local authorities do not attend to it, private storage plants for surplus water will be established. This, of course, will open up a new line of special privilege.

THE nearer the country approaches direct legislation in one direction, the more it legislates through amendment and riders in another.

Arnold Bennett on the "Sleeper"

WITH the critical observations in general of that genial English writer, Arnold Bennett, on the American sleeping car, its patrons, whether they be native or foreign, residents or visitors, will decline to agree. His picture of its interior at midnight, in the current issue of Harper's, as "stifling," "malodorous," etc., will not be acceptable to the millions who have enjoyed its conveniences and its comforts. It struck him as a prison.

He speaks of the passengers as being "herded together." He wonders why public opinion has not arisen in indignation and destroyed it. Yet in practically the next breath he tells of the luxury, even the sumptuousness, of the compartment to which he was assigned while making what Americans would regard as an ordinary chair car trip. Every appointment in this compartment was perfect. Nothing was left to be desired. It surpassed anything he had ever seen on wheels or on tracks before. But it was all spoiled by the jerking of the train.

Here is where American travelers will begin to agree with him. Speaking of the starting of the train, he says: "There was a fearful jerk, and in an instant I understood why sleeping berths in America are always arranged lengthwise with the train. If they were not the passengers might spend most of the night in getting up off the floor and climbing into bed again." Throughout the night, he complains, there were sudden stops and frequent jerks. "I was inclined to go out to the engine driver and say to him," adds Mr. Bennett, "brother, are you aware—you cannot be—that the best European trains start . . . so that it is impossible to distinguish motion from immobility, and come to rest with a softness of doves settling on the shoulders of a young girl?" It is really regrettable that Mr. Bennett did not act upon his impulse in this particular, for somebody ought to tell the engine driver something like this, kindly but firmly. Indeed, it ought to be told to the chairman of the board, to the president, to the directors, to the traffic managers, to the general passenger agents, to the division superintendents, and to all the employees of all the passenger-carrying railroads in the United States.

With all of the boasted—and justly boasted—inventions and improvements and conveniences and comforts that have been incorporated with railroad transportation in this country in the last quarter century, jolting and jerking and slamming and banging have increased rather than diminished. It is due to carelessness and inefficiency both in management and execution. The machinery is plentiful and almost perfect; the handling of it is bad. It is easy to forgive Arnold Bennett for the wrong things he has said about the sleeping car in consideration of the right things he has said about the unnecessary, inexcusable and continuous jarring and noise attending rail transportation in this country. Let us hope that American railroad men may proceed to remove the cause of his criticism in this respect before they take the time to dispute it.

Vicarious Investigation The special board of arbitration now taking evidence in the controversy between eastern railways and their engineers as to wages and other terms of employment, so far as its personnel goes, is representative of the American public at its best and in its marked variety of factors. Serving as peacemakers so that industrial war may be avoided the commissioners deserve a commensurate reward. The least that the American public can do is to know who the men serving on the commission are and credit them with conscientious, patient search for truth. They are laboring vicariously for the public, for all investors whose wealth is mainly in railway stocks and bonds, for all shippers whose profits depend upon high or low rates, for all employees who desire just remuneration and nothing more.

This being so, it follows that the public should expect from the commission not only a formal decision on the details of the issue expressed in technical terms and to be understood best by parties to the arbitration, but also a carefully worked out and elaborated discussion of the larger economic and ethical issues involved in such a controversy. The judgment should be justified by the judges; the verdict explained as well as ennounced. President McCrea of the Pennsylvania road is quite right in stressing this contention.

Assenting to this natural demand the commission may make its service to the nation educational as well as mediatorial, and at a time, too, when light rather than heat is much needed. In a reaction from liberty to authority it will be quite easy for the state to impose conditions on common carriers that will prove ruinous unless equitably borne by all factors that contribute to creation as well as solution of the wage problem. Investors, administrators, patronis and operatives, all must go along together toward equity as a desired goal. Politics, in the common sense of that word, has no place in the process of adjustment viewed ideally; but as a matter of fact it obtrudes again and again with untoward results; and truly courageous is the public man and candidate for office who dares say so

THE peanut privilege on the trains of a western railway system for one year sold recently for $103,800. In this connection peanut hardly expresses the idea, however. Some peanut privileges are broad enough even to embrace the sale of uplift literature.

PENNSYLVANIA'S industrial returns show that the state continues to make marvelous strides in the output of all of her staple manufactures. The present year is the greatest, industrially, in her history.

Pageantry

Publicity

PROJECTORS of attractive features for the international exposition to be held in San Francisco have shrewdly gone to England and entered into negotiations with its most famous expert in pageantry, hoping to induce him to assume responsibility for arranging great spectacles that will attract the multitude. California already has gone farther than any other section of the country, unless it be New England, in experiment with this new form of esthetic and patriotic uplift.

new form of esthetic and patriotic uplift. Salubrious climate and a popular tendency to experiment with the unconventional and the new there combine to make the out-of-door dramatic festival and pageant especially easy to plan for and to carry through.

If F. R. Benson can be induced to take upon himself responsibilities of management, if a right choice of historical scenes in American national life is made, and if the management of the exposition will suitably finance the plan, then a very attractive feature of the exposition will be carried through with distinction, and will prove to persons fortunate enough to see it the educational as well as recreational possibilities of pageantry.

The Chicago fair of 1893 marked the opening of a new era in American appreciation of architecture. Then came an impulse to city planning and beautifying of urban and rural life which has now attained proportions justifying the hope that ultimate America is to be quite a different place from what it bade fair to be when sordid commerce and venal politics held its life in their hands. Adequately handled, on a scale commensurate with the occasion, the San Francisco exposition can so utilize pageantry and kindred arts as to make the achievements of the 1915 fair mark the beginning of another era in American esthetic and civic uplift. For the historical pageant has not only charms for the eye but great inspirational possibilities.

A LAWYER's brief in a certain familiar case recently contained 25,000 words. The court, however, disposed of the principal contention in less than a dozen.

IT WOULD look like the dawn of a new era should Mr. Taft and Mr. Wilson exchange their speeches of acceptance in advance of delivery. A RUNNING summary of the history and operation of the United States postal savings bank system to date is no less interesting than instructive. Only a little more than a year and a half ago, Jan. 3, 1911, the first branch was opened, and for a short time only one office was established in each state. By the close of the year, however, so smoothly and successfully were the experimental stations conducted that the system was

Progress of Postal Banks extended to all of the presidential postoffices throughout the country. These number 7500. A little later the number of branch banks was increased to 8113. At the present time the increase by extension is at the rate of about 1000 a, month. Some idea of the opportunities remaining will be obtained from the fact that there are about 40,000 fourth-class money order offices to which the postal savings bank system will be extended. In cities where only the main offices, or large branch stations, have up to this time received savings deposits, the sub-stations are now being equipped for the work. It is intended that practically every postoffice in the nation, no matter how small or how remote, shall be brought into the system.

So much for facilities. The deposits at the end of the first month amounted to $50,252; in a half year they had increased to $679,310; at the end of the first year to $12,000,000. At the close of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1912, these depositories contained approximately $20,000,000. Compared with the deposits in the private savings banks of the United States these are as yet very small. The total savings bank deposits of the country exceed $4,000,000,000; of the world, over $14,000,000,000. The postal savings bank deposits of the United States are also very small as yet compared with those of some of the European nations. In the United Kingdom, for instance, they run to more than $800,000,000; in France to nearly $300,000,000; in Italy to almost as much. Several countries have two, three and four times the present postal deposits of the United States. Germany's general savings bank deposits come next to those of the United States, exceeding three and one third billions.

One other point remains to be touched upon. It was predicted by opponents of the postal savings bank system that its introduction in this country would prove injurious to private savings and general banking. So far as can be seen at this early day, this has not proved to be the case. The deposits in the private savings banks since the postal system was inaugurated have shown the usual and normal percentage of increase. More than this, the impression prevails among expert observers that the postal accounts draw money out of hiding places and will eyentually ripen into general savings and commercial accounts. From this point of view, the establishment of the postal savings bank system will prove eventually helpful rather than hurtful to banking in general, while it cannot fail to promote thrift and industry.

Canal Methods an Entering Wedge THE NATION'S success in the Panama zone in carrying on the commissariat so efficiently, inexpensively and alluringly as to make the lot of an employee there much better, pecuniarily considered at least, than if he was at Washington in receipt of the same salary, will have results far beyond those usually noted by students of the Goethals regime. It is a record that sets people thinking when they are faced by high living costs that, in so far as remediable by deliberate efforts of consumers, nevers decrease when left to the workings of competitive merchandising and intrusion of the middleman.

of course if the nation has a right to go into the business of seeing to it that its workers get a maximum result from the salaries paid them, then states and cities also have such a right; and it is interesting to note that the progressive administration of Philadelphia, with a director of public works who seems inclined to conserve the economic interests of his fellow officials, is planning to organize a system by which municipal credit shall be placed at the service of city employees, and a city cooperative store started for the sale of provisions.

The theory of protection is so firmly rooted in Pennsylvania that this extension of state aid to a class in the community will cause no alarm. Logic is on the side of the official who proposes it. Of course the attractiveness of public office to those who seek loaves and fishes will not diminish under this form of favoritism. To get more money for a given amount of work than is paid usually by private employers, and then, in addition, to have the purchasing power of the larger income increased by use of city credit—that way lies Easy street, which in time may thus, perchance, become congested with an official throng.

Hankow was a city of China that during the early stages of the recent epoch-marking revolution suffered severely from destruction of property over a considerable area. The city is the commercial center of one of the most progressive of the provinces, Hupeh, and has a great future before it owing to its strategic site. With enterprise and foresight, local provincial officials of the Republican party, acting in cooperation with City Planning in China Chinese investors who have made fortunes in the Straits Settlements, Java, Rangoon and Siam, and counting on formal authorization by the provincial assembly, are planning to rebuild the burned portion of the city, investing in the project not less than 20,000,000 taels.

Some such reconstructive work was inevitable; but the point to be noted is that it involves city planning, with coordinated action by a variety of civic authorities as well as by private experts, all of them waiting for a definite plan to be outlined ere work begins, and all forces planning then to cooperate to bring about a given end. Colleges, museums, industrial bazaars, recreation grounds, tramways, waterworks and residences, as well as warehouses and shops, figure in the scheme.

Not the least interesting aspect of the plan is reliance on capitalists whose fortunes have been made under alien flags but who are loyal to the land of their birth or of their fathers. The Chinaman has been accused of lack of patriotism. Yet, for promotion of the interests of new China the generosity of expatriated Chinese, whether they were temporarily or permanently exiled, has been seldom equaled in the history of social evolution of the Occident; and Asian history has nothing like it.
